He was convinced that of Parnell inwardly differed from many things his disciples did, both inside and outside the House. The Parnellifes had a been pursuing a policy averse to the interests of Ireland since the land act was introduced. It was in consequence of this he separated from the Nationalist move-ment, which impeded beneficial legisla-tion, and imposed upon Ireland three years of the most stringent and hateful Power was frequently interrupted by applause, and when he resumed his seal the cheering was tremendous. The Par-nellites maintained throughout a suller silence. Power's onslaught upon the Parnellites caused a great sensation.

Healy, member for Monaghan, replied comparing Power's speech to dancing on a tight-rope, balancing between the Oringemen and Whigs. He reproached Power or deserting his party and read extracts rom a speech by Power denouncing the desertion of O'Donoghue. Healy con-cluded with describing Lord Rossmore the suspended justice of the peace, of Monaghan, as a "bigoted, malevolet Justin McCarthy, Liberal, and Home member for Longford, accused the Orange-men of seeking to involve the country in civil war. He described Power as a r The House then adjourned.
